A space for all people...

The Gothic Folly recasts the emotional power of sacred architecture in scaffolding and light.

A central rose window of mesh and LEDs hangs suspended between two main towers. Four spires define the facades, draped with canopy lights that highlight the roof lines, and cascading pointed arches form the nave. By day its open frame holds the sky and casts shifting shadows across the ground. At night it becomes a beacon, lit and played live through Folly Mix.

What was once designed for doctrine becomes a space for collective devotion, directed outward toward one another instead of upward toward a single authority.

Configuration	Front towers and spires, major arches, rose window

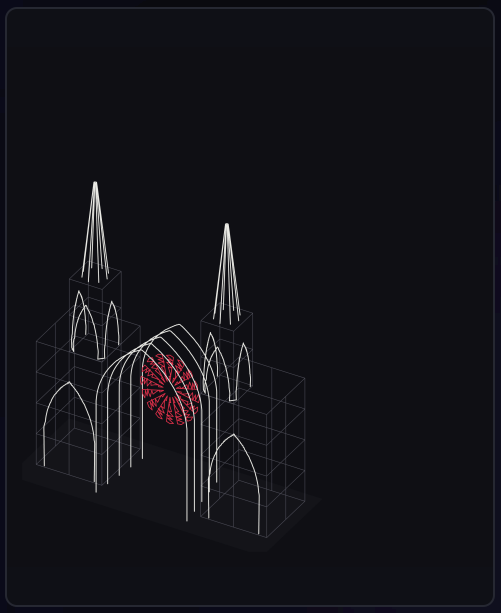

Adaptations

One structure, shaped to the site

The Folly can respond to its environment, changing its form to fit each site while keeping its presence. Folly Mix adapts every look to whichever parts are standing.
